Does Bill Gates Have a 'Great Reset' Plan to Privatize Global Food System?

Viewed from the perspective of The Great Reset, it appears Bill Gates may be engaged in the same kind of wealth-shift scheme as BlackRock and other investment groups that are buying up single-family homes and turning them into rentals.

Story at-a-glance:

- In early June, the government of The Netherlands announced it would cut the size of livestock herds in the country by 30% to meet European Union nitrogen and ammonia pollution rules.
- According to Thierry Baudet, Dutch Parliament member, the government is following the script of The Great Reset, which requires weakening the country, making it more dependent on food imports, and diluting nationalism by taking in more immigrants. To make room for immigrant housing, they need to take land from the farmers.
- The newly assigned Minister for Nature and Nitrogen Policy, Christianne van der Wal-Zeggelink, is married to Piet van der Wal, who together with his brother are heavily invested in the major online grocery retailer Picnic. In September 2021, Bill Gates invested an estimated half-billion dollars into Picnic, thereby becoming one of its lead investors. Gates' involvement has raised questions about government corruption.
- At the same time, the Dutch government is preparing to radically restrict livestock farming and meat production, Gates is gobbling up farmland back home. Despite land prices being at a record high, Gates purchased a 2,100-acre potato farm in North Dakota in June, bringing the total land share held by the Gates' Red River Trust above 270,000 acres.
- Gates claims he intends to lease the farmland to farmers. Viewed from the perspective of The Great Reset, it would then appear Gates may be engaged in the same kind of wealth-shift scheme as BlackRock and other investment groups that are buying up single-family homes and turning them into rentals. The end goal is to eliminate all private ownership and turn the population into serfs.

In early June, the government of The Netherlands announced it would cut the size of livestock herds in the country by 30% to meet European Union nitrogen and ammonia pollution rules.

As a result of this "green" policy, many farmers will be driven out of business and they have gathered in protest across the country.

This is important because many may not realize that even though The Netherlands is a small country, it's the second-largest exporter of agriculture in the world, after the United States.

As with current energy shortages, the forced reductions in farming and food production are said to be an "unavoidable" part of the Green Agenda to improve air, soil and water quality.

In a public statement about the new emissions targets, the Dutch government even admitted that "the honest message… is that not all farmers can continue their business."

Those who do continue will have to come up with creative solutions to meet the new emissions restrictions.

A clear case of corruption?

The restrictions on nitrogen for livestock farmers have befuddled many.

Why would government restrict farming at a time when food shortages and famine loom on the horizon worldwide (see video below)? Some claim to have discovered conflicts of interest within the Dutch government that can help explain this irrational move.

The newly assigned Minister for Nature and Nitrogen Policy (who created the nitrogen regulations and is responsible for overseeing the cuts to farming), Christianne van der Wal-Zeggelink, is married to Piet van der Wal, who together with his brother, Bouke van der Wal, own a massive supermarket chain called Boni.

As noted by The Conservative Treehouse:

> "When Dutch farmers sell product to Boni they are directly funding the wealth of the government minister who seeks to destroy their livelihoods."

The van der Wal family is also heavily invested in a major online grocery retailer called Picnic. Picnic buys food at wholesale prices directly from Boni, which minimizes its operational costs. Picnic basically functions as a home delivery service for Boni.

In September 2021, Bill Gates entered the Dutch enterprise. He invested an estimated half-billion dollars into Picnic, thereby becoming one of its lead investors. Not surprisingly, Picnic focuses on selling the fake "food" that Gates is invested in and promotes, imitation beef in particular.

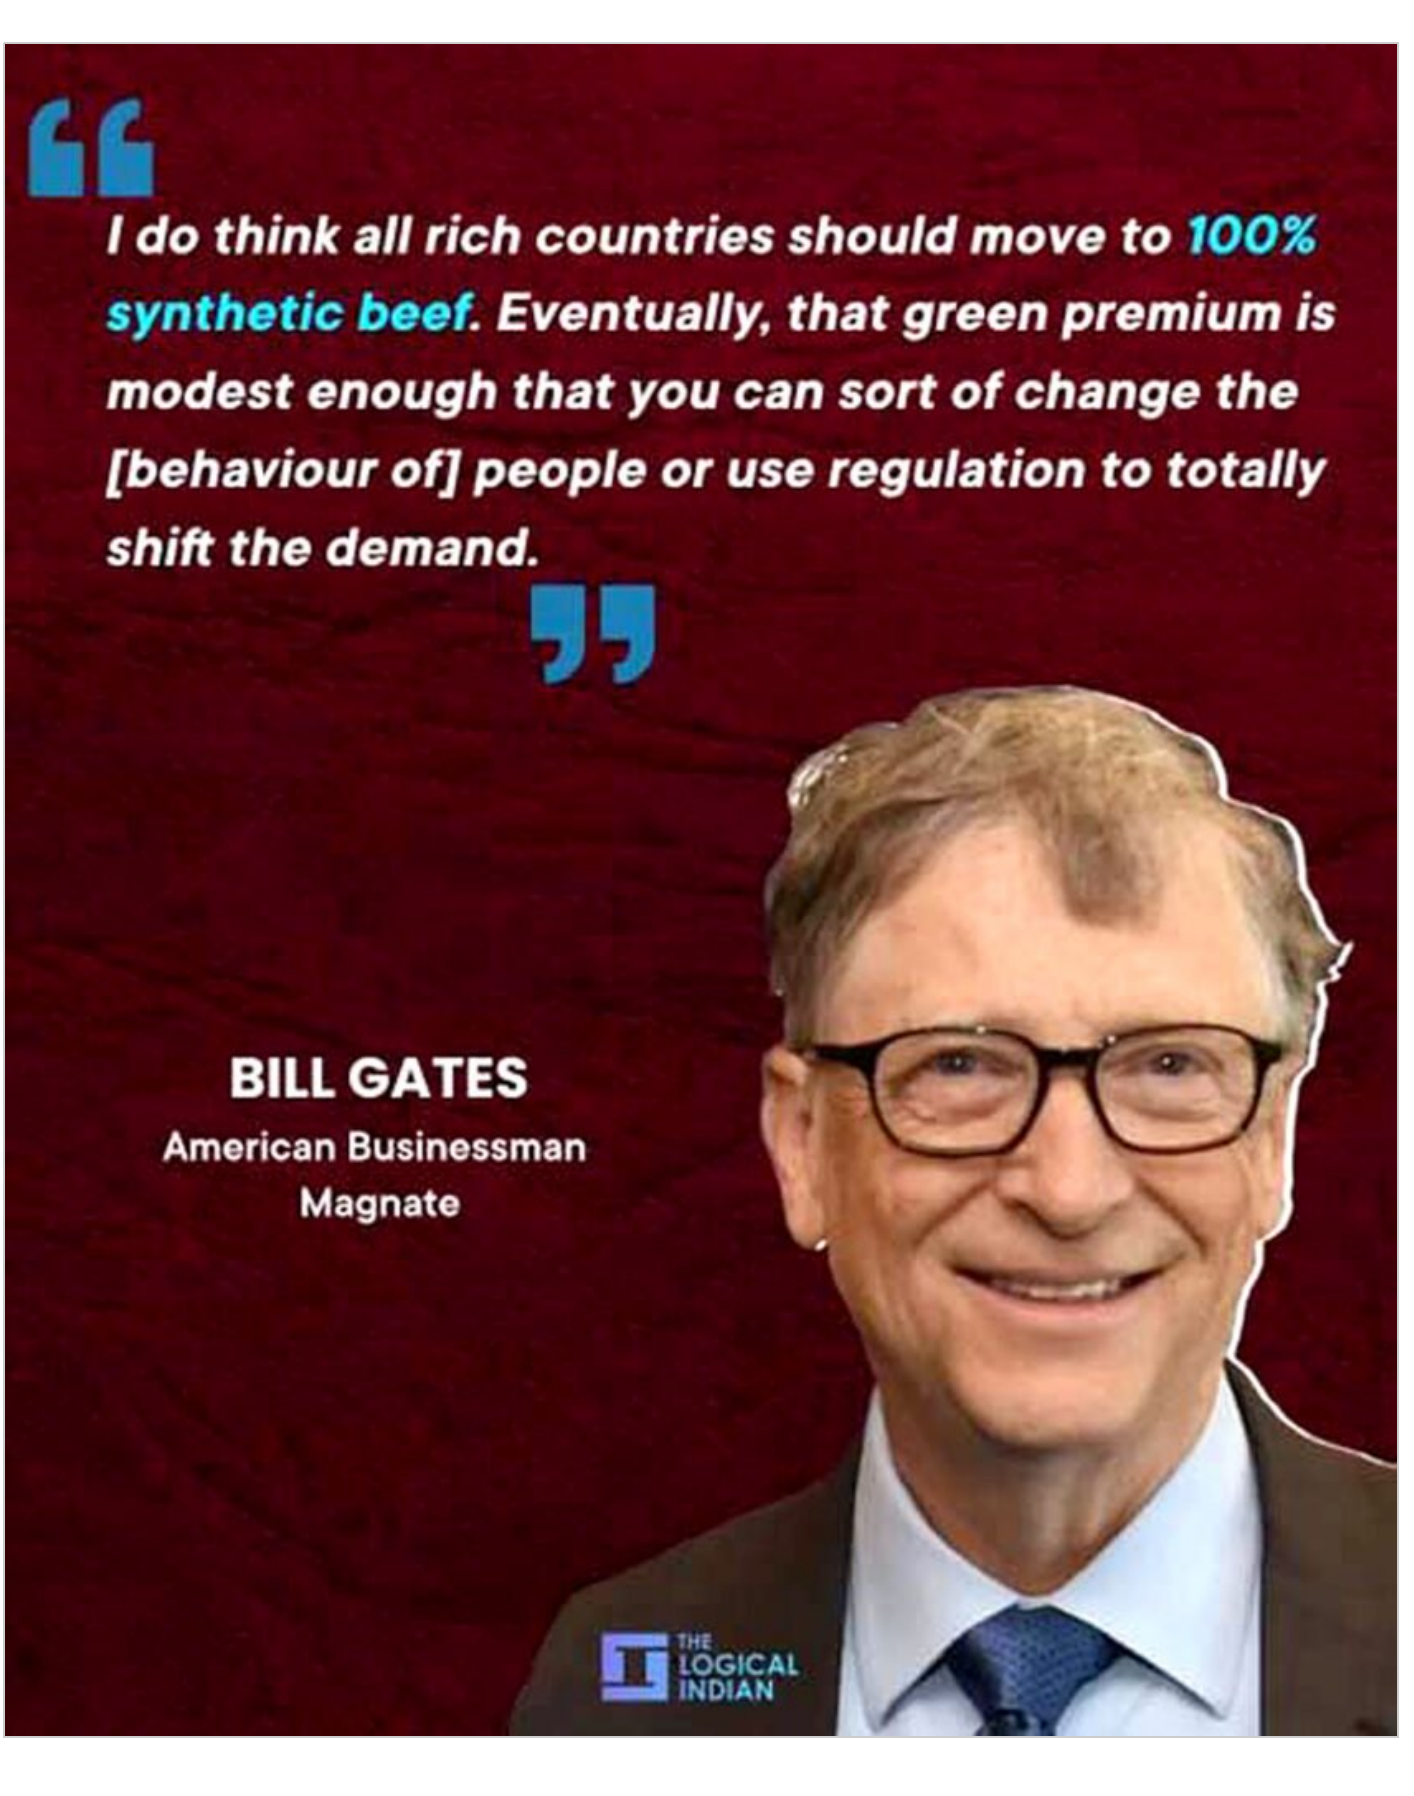
Michiel Muller, the CEO of Picnic, a Dutch climate change activist, has also publicly vowed to "change the entire food system" to be in line with sustainable goals, which falls right in line with Gates' agenda.

The strong recommendation to replace beef with fake meat was made in Gates' book "How to Avoid a Climate Disaster: The Solutions We Have and the Breakthroughs We Need," released in February 2021.



I do think all rich countries should move to 100% synthetic beef. Eventually, that green premium is modest enough that you can sort of change the [behaviour of] people or use regulation to totally shift the demand.
BILL GATES
American Businessman
Magnate
THE LOGICAL INDIAN

In an interview with MIT Technology Review, he also suggested that people could learn to like fake meat and, if resistance continues, regulations may be needed to force the switch.

According to The Countersignal:

> "Many participating in the ongoing farmers' protests in Holland have openly stated they believe Gates may be partly responsible for pushing additional climate laws."

Curiously, on July 10 a large Picnic delivery facility in Almelo, Holland, burned to the ground under mysterious circumstances.

Why get rid of farmers amid rising food insecurity?

The attempt to rid The Netherlands of livestock farmers really only makes sense if seen from the globalists' point of view, with an eye on The Great Reset, the Green New Deal, Agenda 2030 and related Sustainable Development Goals.

Indeed, according to Dutch Parliament member Thierry Baudet (video below), that's really what the nitrogen restrictions are all about. The Dutch government is following the script of The Great Reset, he says, which requires weakening the country, making it less independent and more dependent on food imports.

The Great Reset script also calls for diluting nationalism and weakening borders by taking in more immigrants, and to make room for immigrant housing, they need to take land from the farmers.

So, the new nitrogen rules are basically a precursor to a land grab. They intend to put farmers out of business so they can take their land and stack it full of low-income, government-assistance apartment buildings.

Aside from that, farmers also pose a threat to the technocratic elitists because they don't need to rely on the government for basics such as food and shelter, and they can allow those who buy their food to maintain their independence as well.

The globalists' plan is to eliminate access to as much real food as possible and replace natural foods with patented foodstuffs so that the population becomes entirely dependent on them for survival.

At that point, they are easily controlled. Eliminating independent food producers — farmers — is therefore a key to the globalist cabal's eventual success.

Gates gobbles up farmland while pushing fake foods

At the same time the Dutch government is preparing to radically restrict livestock farming and meat production — likely with Gates' blessing, if not due to his influence — Gates is gobbling up farmland back home (video below).

Despite land prices being at a record-high, Gates purchased a 2,100-acre potato farm in North Dakota in June, bringing the total land share held by the Gates' Red River Trust above 270,000 acres — up from about 242,000 acres in mid-September 2021.

The above map, from AgWeb, shows the distribution of his land holdings prior to his North Dakota acquisition. As you can see, the vast majority is farmland.

Gates plan: Turn farmers into modern serfs

However, as reported by AgWeb at the end of June, Gates didn't get a warm welcome:

> "North Dakota hosts 'corporate farming laws' that barres [sic] corporations and limited liability companies from owning and leasing farms and ranches. With the Gates's new $13.5 million farmland purchase, North Dakotans — including the attorney general — are concerned the sale violates the state's law. The North Dakota attorney general's office sent a letter to the Red River Trust on Tuesday, alerting the trustee of the North Dakota land law.
> "'Our office needs to confirm how your company uses this land and whether this use meets any of the statutory exceptions, such as the business purpose exception,' wrote Drew Wrigley, North Dakota attorney general."

MoneyWise followed up on the story, reporting that by July 5, Gates had secured legal approval for his farm purchase — a decision that has raised the ire of many North Dakotans who don't believe Gates has good intentions.

According to MoneyWise:

> "The anti-corporate farming law does allow individual trusts to own farmland if it is leased to farmers — and that's what Gates' firm plans to do."

Viewed from the perspective of The Great Reset, it appears Gates may be engaged in the same kind of subversive wealth-shift scheme as BlackRock and other investment groups that are buying up single-family homes.

They buy them, often sight-unseen and at above-market prices, with the intent of turning them into rentals. This too is part and parcel of The Great Reset and the United Nation's Sustainable Development Goals.

The intent is to eliminate all private ownership and turn the population into modern serfs. "Serf" is a term that describes people who are required to work for the "lord" who owns the land they live on, or who are otherwise underpaid, overworked or exploited in some way.

That'll be all of us, one day, if the world doesn't wake up and refuse to go along with the globalist cabal's Great Reset plans. The plight of the Dutch farmers is just the beginning.

Road to Serfdom: Corporations, funds, trusts & "environmental" groups should not be able to own US real estate except for their own offices. They should be forced to sell to American citizens, not corporations, eco-trusts etc. Non-residents & foreign entities shouldn't be allowed to own US real estate. Only US citizen families.

If our trading "partners" could only spend the money we pay them for their goods & services to buy our goods & services - not our land, equities, mortgages, resources, politicians & souls - there would be no trade imbalance, American industry & jobs would be strong, "housing" & land would be affordable for us</ub>.

If we don't stop this soon, we're all going to be renters, sharecroppers, serfs & slaves, jammed into high density "housing" designed by neo-feudalists.

The eco-land-trust scam needs to be exposed. They use taxpayer money (tax-deductible donations) to lock up land, islands etc - allegedly on behalf of humanity - but the truth is that it's so only the elite can get into that land without their permission, or afford any land. In the early 1990s Bill Gates purchased a GMO seed corn patent from a failing San Diego biotech company. It had a curious side effect which its developers assumed made it unsellable: it lowered sperm counts.

Gates took control of Monsanto and it was immediately put into the market and is now the dominant corn produced globally. Because corn is fertilized via wind, Monsanto/BAYER [Gates] prosecutes farmers who attempt to grow non-GMO corn and inevitably win.
Every time a boy or man eats Fritos or Doritos or a taco shell, he is eating a dose of infertility. By law in the US, food containing corn isn't subject to labeling laws and corn is even in the packaging. Biodegradable bags, meat trays, "plastic" film, medical equipment, powder, cosmetics, glycerine ("vegetable source") anything even remotely "natural" without specifics is gonna be corn. To say Gates has his hands in everything related to human reproduction is an understatement. He funds abortion globally, he's bankrolled MIT'a development of a remotely controlled contraception vaccine, he funds abortion clinics in African countries specifically because his father was a close friend and legal advisor to racist eugenicist Margaret Sanger. He's not buying up land to reclaim it for Gaia but to ensure no food is grown on it.
And he was on Epstein Island numerous times. Why isn't he in a prison jumpsuit yet??

Bill Gates is a very dangerous and evil megalomaniac. Everything he does is to put money into his own pocket, and deny others the freedoms he wants for himself. He wants you to be restricted to the 100 miles you may be able to get out of your tiny car's battery. He will continue to ride in gas powered luxury. He wants you to be limited on your air travel. He will continue to travel in massive private jet planes. He wants you to live in a 1000 square foot hovel, while he will continue to jet between his many massive homes all over the world. He wants you to eat bugs, and will deny you the ability to even buy meat of any kind as he buys up the resources for same, and at the same time is buying up the politicians in many countries, demanding they agree with his world view. He will continue to eat Wagu beef burgers.

Everything he does is evil, and should be thwarted.

I don't even know why I read these articles. I know exactly what these (conflict of interest) evil minions are doing and what's coming! So billy boy will lease farmland to "farmers" and as owner, he will tell them what to grow and how to grow it! They will be buying all their GMO seeds from Bayer (formerly Monsatan); as well as all the toxic pesticides that are part and parcel of their monocropping. There won't actually be many humans involved, because the farms will mostly be run by A.I.!

Netherlands produces also the most beautiful wholesome bio-dynamic food products. In that sense they are (were?) currently on the forefront of a totally new food agriculture concept. Very advanced. It s all so very cynical that we could slide back to the dark Middle-ages with the viewpoints of these old, paternalistic, greedy men and women. This is not what Rudolph Steiner had in mind...

So it is 'organic' farming . Thanks for the link. But it is apparently not the one used in Netherlands, and in the States or Canada. They use chemicals, and also CAFOS according to the link provided here by someone else. This pollutes no matter how you look at it. I read about CAFOS. ,,,it is absolutely cruel to animals. Here is the quote from the provided link: "The Netherlands is by far and away the leading producer of nitrogen emissions. But, modern CAFOS, where tens of thousands of cattle, pigs and chickens are packed onto a few acres and force fed an artificial diet and injected with 80% of the worlds antibiotics to keep them from getting sick due to wallowing around in their own manure all day - is not farming. That is industrial agriculture run amok. And yes, it produces a lot of excess nitrogen."
